

What would happen if everything changed tomorrow?

The conversation every homeowner needs to have.

It's a fact...

YOUR HOME MAY BE REPOSSESSED
IF YOU DO
NOT KEEP UP
REPAYMENTS ON YOUR MORTGAGE.

Five ways that a loss of income can make you homeless.

1. You are made redundant.

Every month, we rely on income from our employer to pay the bills. It arrives, we spend it, and we rarely stop to think about what would happen if it didn't.

Page 4

2. You are unable to work due to an accident or sickness.

With no income coming in, how does the mortgage get paid, and for how long can you manage without it?

3. Months turn into years and a return to work is unlikely.

Short term cover runs out. Savings run dry. At what point does staying in your home become impossible?

Page 8

4. You die.

Your income secured the mortgage. Without it, who carries that responsibility, and can they afford to?

Page 10

5. You leave behind a family dependent on your income.

What about the bills, the food, the school runs, everything your income quietly funded until now?

Meet Luke

Luke is 28, a senior sales manager with five years at the same company. Good salary, solid track record, and a mortgage he and his wife had always felt comfortable with. Redundancy was something that happened to other people.

The email arrived on a Tuesday afternoon. A restructure. His role no longer existed. Four weeks' notice and a statutory redundancy payment that looked reasonable until he worked out how long it would actually last.

The mortgage was £1,450 a month. The redundancy pay covered four months, five if they were careful. After that, the savings would start going. After that, they would have a problem.

Happy ever after

Luke had redundancy cover in place. From the month his notice period ended, his policy paid a monthly benefit directly to him. The mortgage was met. The household bills were covered. He took the time to find the right next role, not just the first one available.

How would your story end?

Redundancy rarely comes with a warning. The mortgage doesn't wait while you find a new job.

What if...

You are made redundant with no salary?

Redundancy doesn't pause your direct debits. From the day your salary stops, the mortgage and the everyday cost of running a household carry on exactly as before.

Peace of mind

The bills don't stop when the salary does. Redundancy cover makes sure you don't have to choose between paying them and finding the right next job.

It's a fact

A YouGov poll revealed that 46% of large businesses are likely to make redundancies and 1 in 5 (21%) small and medium-sized (SME) businesses said that were likely to do so over the same period.

Take advice

Redundancy cover pays a monthly benefit if you are made compulsorily redundant, typically for up to 12 months, replacing the income that keeps your mortgage and household running while you get back on your feet.

Step 1 We discuss your potential benefits.

Step 2 We calculate any shortfalls you may have.

Meet Sarah

Sarah is 32, works in marketing for a mid-sized company, and has always considered herself one of the sensible ones. She has a small emergency fund, no credit card debt, and a mortgage she and her husband manage comfortably on two salaries.

Sarah's story starts in the middle of an ordinary Wednesday, her appendix ruptured.

Emergency surgery, complications, and a recovery that stretched far beyond what anyone expected. Her consultant signed her off for four months. Her employer, sympathetic but only agreed to pay her full salary for four weeks.

After that, she was on Statutory Sick Pay (currently £117 per week).

Happy ever after

£2,500 a month became £507. But this time, it didn't matter. Sarah had cover. The claim was paid. The mortgage was met. The savings stayed intact. She rested. She recovered. She finally finished every Netflix box set she'd been promising herself for years. And financially - nothing had changed at all.

How would your story end?

If you can't work, your only job should be to get better.
The bills should take care of themselves.

What if...

You find yourself unable to work due to sickness?

Sick pay runs out fast, for some immediately – and after a matter of months, most households are running on a single income or savings alone.

Peace of mind

You insure your car. You insure your home. But arguably, the most important thing to insure is the income that pays for all of it.

It's a fact

Every day in the UK, more than 1,000 people receive a cancer diagnosis. For a significant number that means months of chemotherapy, no salary, and a household that still has bills to pay.

Take advice

Income protection pays you a regular monthly income if you can't work due to illness or accident. It replaces the missing salary that pays your mortgage and bills.

However you use the money, you are not worrying about bills.

Step 1 We discuss your employer benefits.

Step 2 We calculate any shortfalls you may have.

Step 3 We produce an illustration to your budget.

Meet Dave

Dave is 43, works in project management, and by most measures has life well organised. Good job, young family, a mortgage he's comfortably managing. He keeps fit, doesn't smoke, and has never given his health a second thought. On Monday morning he woke up like any other day. Coffee, school run, emails by eight-thirty.

By Monday evening, everything had changed.

A serious diagnosis, the kind that arrives without warning, meant Dave wouldn't be returning to work anytime soon. His treatment would take months. His recovery, longer still.

Happy ever after

Dave had critical illness cover in place. When his claim was accepted, a tax-free lump sum was paid directly to him. The mortgage was cleared. The financial pressure lifted overnight. Dave focused entirely on his treatment and his family, not on how the bills were going to be paid.

How would your story end?

If you can't work, your only job should be to get better.
The bills should take care of themselves.

What if...

Your health takes a turn for the worst long-term?

Sick pay runs out. Savings run down. And a serious illness rarely fits neatly into the window your employer will cover.

Peace of mind

A mortgage is likely the largest financial commitment you will ever make. Critical illness cover exists to make sure a serious diagnosis doesn't put it at risk.

It's a fact

Cancer, heart attack, and stroke account for the majority of critical illness claims in the UK. These aren't rare events, they happen to ordinary people, living ordinary lives, on ordinary Monday mornings.

Take advice

A tax-free lump sum paid on diagnosis of a covered condition. Yours to use however you need - mortgage, paying for private treatment or making precious memories.

However you use the money, you are not worrying about bills.

Step 1 We discuss your current arrangements.

Step 2 We calculate any shortfalls you may have.

Step 3 We produce an illustration to your budget.

Meet Peter

Peter is 46, the main earner in his household and the person his family depends on. He has a mortgage, a daughter in school, and a partner who works part time around the school run. By most measures, life is good.

Peter didn't plan to die. Nobody does. By his own admission he was fit as a fiddle, but a fatal road traffic accident changed everything in an instant. Nobody saw it coming.

When he died, he left behind a mortgage his partner couldn't afford alone, a daughter who still needed everything, and a household built entirely around an income that was no longer there.

Happy ever after

Peter had life cover in place. When he died, a tax-free lump sum was paid to his family. The mortgage was cleared. Tom didn't have to sell the house, find a second job, or explain to Penny why they had to move. It was the hardest time of their lives, but financially, Peter had made sure they were protected.

How would your story end?

The people you love depend on you more than you know.
Life cover makes sure they're protected.

What if...

You die, and are no longer around to pay the mortgage?

When you die, there is no recovery period, no return to work, no second chance. There is only the mortgage, the bills, and a family that still needs to be provided for.

Peace of mind

Your mortgage is probably the largest debt your family carries. Life cover makes sure that debt doesn't outlive you.

It's a fact

In the UK, someone dies every five minutes leaving behind people who depend on them. For most families, the mortgage is the single biggest financial risk that death leaves unresolved.

Take advice

Life cover pays a tax-free lump sum to your family when you die, enough to clear the mortgage and make sure the people you love aren't facing financial hardship on top of everything else.

Step 1 We discuss your current policies.

Step 2 We calculate any shortfalls you may have.

Step 3 We produce an illustration to your budget.

Meet Tom & Penny

Tom never expected to be doing this alone. At 44, he's a single parent, working part time around Penny's school run, and trying to hold everything together in a house that still has Peter's name on the mortgage.

Peter had life cover in place. The mortgage was cleared. But that was just the beginning.

The bills didn't stop. The energy costs didn't stop. The everyday reality of raising Penny alone on a single wage didn't stop. Tom faced decisions no one should have to make while they're still grieving. And through all of it, Penny still asked about Disneyland. The trip the three of them had always planned.

Happy ever after

Peter had both life cover and family income benefit in place. The mortgage was cleared. The monthly payments covered the bills. Tom didn't have to choose between being a parent and keeping the lights on. And when Penny asked about Disneyland, Tom said yes. Peter planned for everything. Even the things he'd never get to see.

How would your story end?

Peter thought ahead. His family kept their home, their income, and their Disneyland trip.

What if...

You and your salary go but the bills keep coming in?

When an income is gone, there is no recovery period and no return to normal. The mortgage may be cleared, but the bills and everyday life carry on regardless.

Peace of mind

Your mortgage is the largest debt your family carries. But it isn't the only one. Life cover and Family Income Benefit combined make sure your family keeps their home.

It's a fact

In the UK, more than 270,000 children are living in households that have lost a parent. For most of those families, financial pressure arrives at the same time as grief.

Take advice

Life cover cleared the mortgage. Family Income Benefit covers everything that comes after it, a regular monthly income for the years your family needs it most.

No need to worry about bills, just focus on being there for your family.

Step 1 We assess your current income.

Step 2 We calculate any shortfalls you may have.

Step 3 We produce an illustration to your budget.

Let's continue the conversation.

We want to learn what's important to you, and how you feel about your ability to ensure that you and your family are provided for when things take a turn for the worse. Every household is different, the right plan starts with a proper conversation, not a product.

A friendly discussion

No jargon, no pressure, just an honest look at what you need. With your existing cover reviewed, we start with what's already in place before suggesting anything new.
